Introduction

The Radcliffe Collection, named after its chief donor Sir Frederick Radcliffe (1861-1952), is the Anglican library of Liverpool Cathedral and St Aidan's Theological College. The Collection began with Radcliffe's gift of the library of Christopher Wordsworth (1848-1938), who served as Chancellor of Lincoln Cathedral and later was a canon of Salisbury Cathedral, where he held a number of posts including that of librarian and chancellor. Wordsworth's library reflects his academic interests in historical and liturgical research as well as containing books and manuscripts that had belonged to or were written by family members who held prominent positions in the Church of England.

Primarily, the focus of the collection was to be a 'liturgical library'. Radcliffe aimed to buy exemplars of every book printed for liturgical use in England during the Tudor and Stuart reigns, both Roman Catholic and Anglican, to be brought together alongside medieval manuscripts to document and observe the liturgical transition during this period. Indeed the collection houses Missals dating from the pre-Reformation era, some 15th century European manuscript books of hours, 16th and 17th century bibles and early commentaries, hymn books and ecclesiastical music, and a large number of early printed books chiefly of liturgical and scholastic interest.

With the refurbishment of the Sheppard-Worlock Library in 2012, Liverpool Hope University can now boast a British Standard vault designed to house the Radcliffe manuscripts and early printed books which were, until very recently, held in the University of Liverpool's Sydney Jones Library. During the 1960's a short-title catalogue of the books printed before 1801 was produced with the advice and skill of Mr David Cook, formerly of the Harold Cohen Library in Liverpool University. The printing of the original catalogue was made possible through the generosity of Mrs Watson and Mrs Denman, daughters of Sir Frederick Radcliffe, and his grandson Mr Philip Radcliffe Evans. This new catalogue has been produced to amalgamate the original short-title catalogue together with a list of the manuscripts, later additions, private presses, limited editions and St. Aidan's early print books. However, please note that the Wordsworth Collection is not listed. The Radcliffe Collection is being catalogued onto Liverpool Hope University's Library online catalogue but until this process is complete this printed catalogue offers users an insight into what the collection holds.
